My child,you are dead.But mum, I am alive. Renata Leuffen

How can one process the death of one's own child ? How can we deal with this terrible event and how with this great sadness, the grief that constantly surroundsus? Renata Leuffen is completely convinced that our dead children live, that they are alive and dwell in this beautiful world that we describe with the word Heaven. Renata's son, Danny, died suddenly in his sleep when he was only 27 years old. Renata's poems describe a mother who speaks to her dead child, and the child lives and responds. The mother perceives the words of her child in a supernatural way. Mother and child communicate. This book is comforting. This book gives hope and certainty. Renata has even after the death of her son a living relationship with their living son and shares this secret with the reader.The poems are full of life and help all concerned parents to cope with that which you really cannot cope with: the death of your own child .
