World Championship Preview - Combinations by Anand and Carlsen (Practical Tactics Series Book 3) Roman Jiganchine

The World Championship match between Magnus Carlsen and Viswanathan Anand has been anticipated throughout the chess world since Carlsen qualified from the London Candidates tournament, and there has been no shortage of forecasts. Rather than try to predict the winner, this book gives a preview of the match by showing the best combinations of each player - collected throughout their entire careers. You get a chance to play like the current world champion, or like the future one, if the title changes hands in the 2013 match. Over 130 annotated test positions will help you better appreciate the enormous tactical strength of both players, while also serving as a tribute to the careers of both players.

The format was specifically designed for e-readers. To see solutions for puzzles and questions - just go to the next page. The book is the third in the "Practical Tactics Series", after "Counterattack with Alexander Morozevich" and "Tactics from Chess World Cup 2013".

The author, National Master Roman Jiganchine, has been a chess coach of many Canadian junior players, with his students having won many Canadian championship youth titles in various age groups.
