How To Create Better Paintings Becky Joy

The creation of a representational painting is the creation of a three dimensional illusion on a two dimensional surface. There are good, sound principles that have been passed down through generations of artists that can be employed to convince the viewer of atmosphere, form, interplay of light, and life in a painting. This book will convey some of the foundations of painting that I have learned over the years.

These principles can be learned by nearly everyone. Successful paintings are not created purely on talent. In fact, more important than talent, is the desire to spend painting and studying. There are no short cuts here. Each painting you create is a problem solved, a lesson learned. Painting can be a lifelong endeavor and learning experience. There can be frustration and failed attempts, but conquering those can be an exhilarating experience. After learning good foundational concepts, finding poetry in your work will be up to you and unique to you.

Learn about equipment and supplies and the preparation of your supplies to begin the process of painting. You will learn about the elements of composition | lines, values, shapes, edges, texture and color.

The principles of design are discussed along with composition and lighting in your paintings. I explain different processes in the creation of your art. Starting in plein air painting is discussed. I have written about the presentation and framing of your art and how to price your work.

The book ends with a summary of do's and don'ts to help keep you on track in your journey to create better paintings using foundational concepts.
